BIDS FOR HIGH SCHOOL. New Proposals Invited for the New Central Building.

Bids for the construction of the new Central High School building, authorized by Congress to cost $1,200,000, will be received until January 27, according to an announcement this afternoon.

Proposals formerly submitted were rejected because they failed to come within the amount available. The specifications have since been altered by Municipal Architect Snowden Ashford so as to reduce the cost by about $80,000.

Senator Lane of Oregon, who recently introduced the bill providing for a division of the appropriation, in order that two high school buildings might be built instead of only one, several days ago requested the Commissioner to postpone advertising new bids until the Senate has had a chance to act upon his bill.

As a month will be required before the new proposals can be opened, the Senate it is pointed out, will have opportunity to consider the Lane measure before a contract for the new building is awarded.

HEARING ON KENYON BILL. The House District Committee to Hold Meeting Tomorrow.

The House District committee is to hold a hearing tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock on the Kenyon "red light" bill, which already has been adopted by the Senate.

Opponents of segregation are preparing to go before the committee to support the bill.

Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the international reform bureau, appeared before sixteen different meetings Sunday in support of the measure, and spoke again yesterday morning before the Presbyterian Clergyman.

Dr. Crafts and other supporters of the Kenyon bill urge in its favor its success in Des Moines, Ia., and other cities where the same plan has been adopted.

The adoption of a compromise agreement by which the property of the late Mrs. Annis A. Cole of this city, left by her almost in entirety to the diocese of Washington to turn over to the trustees of the Protestant Episcopal cathedral fund, is divided between that fund and the two brothers of the deceased, was the result of a special diocesan convention called by Bishop Harding at noon today.

According to the compromise, the cathedral receives 60 per cent and the two brothers 20 per cent each of both the personality and real estate.

Mrs. Cole, who died January 3, 1913, left a personal estate valued, according to the appraisement, at $27,000 and a real estate of about $40,000, which estates, after the payment of certain bequests, were left substantially to the diocese of Washington, to be eventually turned over to the trustees of the cathedral fund.

The two brothers of Mrs. Cole, Horatio and Henry F. King of New York, entered "caveats" to the will. Their attorneys, A. S. Worthington and Charles F. Prall, with those retained by the cathedral fund, Ross Perry and Henry W. Sohon, agreed that if the diocese were willing a compromise dividing the estate in the proportion stated should be made, the caveats withdrawn and the will admitted to special probate.
